In France, there was a very high prevalence of 2 out of 3 children having severe or profound ID \[[@CR38]\], and in Taiwan a one-in-four prevalence of hearing impairment in all age groups \[[@CR39]\]. However, no association was found between the risk of hearing impairment and ID in our analysis, which could be due to the relatively small number of children with hearing impairment in the study. Strengths and limitations {#Sec14} ------------------------ The main strengths of this study lie in the size and the population-based design. In addition, we used data from a nation-wide population-based study, where the participants were children randomly selected from a national database in southern China, which ensured the validity and representativeness of the participants in the present study. The samples of the present study were much larger than the samples of most of the previous studies conducted in China. A second major strength of the study was that the examinations were performed in a standardized and consistent manner. However, several limitations should be considered. First, the quality of the data collected in the present study was

Disk Space Monitor.The popular lifestyle TV show "Queer Eye" has just been canceled at Netflix. The show's third season was about to air when the network announced the cancellation. "Queer Eye" is a heartwarming and uplifting show that features five gay men who were named one of the "Fab Five" when they auditioned for the show. The "Fab Five" mentors the male contestants in every area of life — from fashion and style to food and cooking. The show has garnered a huge following with over 10 million viewers. It's rare for a network to cancel a show as popular as this. According to Variety, a spokesperson for Netflix said, "We are deeply proud of our 130-year history of supporting LGBTQ+ creators and makers. We have a great deal more to do to ensure all members of the LGBTQ+ community are represented on screen and in front of the camera." Related: Ellen DeGeneres reveals she has a new show for Netflix The show follows three gay men who have already been on the show — Karamo Brown, Tan France, and Antoni Porowski. Each of the "Fab Five" gets $100,000 per episode, a new set of clothes, and a car to use. One of the men will be asked to leave after each season ends. The show premiered on Netflix in February of 2019. "Queer Eye" wasn't the first gay show to be canceled by a network. Another one, "Queer as Folk" was canceled by Showtime after the channel aired its second season. It featured a group of gay men who gathered together for a new life. The theme song for the show was "Save Me" by Joe, which was recorded by Gloria Gaynor. At the time of the cancellation of "Queer as Folk," a viewer poll asked for fans to choose the gay show they wanted to see continue on. "Chapelle" was the winner. "Queer as Folk" aired for only two seasons. Its creator, Kim Peter, said in a statement, "While 'Queer as Folk' was a huge hit with my audience, it
