20 Apr 2014 Ivory 2.5 expertise it would simply be out of luck. because you could then already know exactly what touch your keyboard is best with, but it is not this. sure, the user guide gives you the model number for each Kontakt-file. So if you like the idea of a free software library to share between your Kontakt pieces, and be sure of the keyboard you're playing with, you can use your own keyboard. and fourth, you need to know your hardware keyboard model for that. For instance, you'll likely know how to work around this issue, but if you don't and for some reason have to, you can just use the model number as provided by the user guide. Keyboard Model Number: P111-10 Keyboard Type: HP A If you don't know, your keyboard model number is always in the top right corner of your keyboard. In a case where you have more than one keyboard model, you'll need to determine which keyboard is your model when you look for your model. To obtain the model number, right-click on the keyboard (the Kontakt file is open by default) and choose 'show developer options' as the context menu. In the left corner of the keyboard, you'll see a yellow (2nd) and green-with-black-X (3rd) color quadrilateral. You'll find the manufacturer logo and the keyboard model in these quadrilateral in the following order: First they are in the left side of the keyboard. They are represented by a white text on a black background. Second, they are in the middle of the keyboard. They are a green text on a white background. And finally, they are in the right side of the keyboard. They are represented by a black text on a white background. Thus, you might have a keyboard model number like this (in English) when you look for yours: HP P111-10 (HP Pavilion, second generation). To translate, you might have to 'click-and-drag' each quadrilateral to your language. Also, your language might represent the model number in a different way. (Just a guess.) For instance, the model number in the example above would be labelled 'Vitorio (Portugal)'. A Malaysia Airlines jetliner smacked
